INTRODUCTION

KEY CHOICE - UNLOCK THE FUTURE OF PPA

It reaffirms the third meeting as a key requirement to support the growth trend in the formalization of long-term energy contracts structured through PPAs, Green conditionalities linked to sustainability, Energy Release beyond 2.0, as well as physical and virtual on-site solutions.

Through a full day of discussion, the event will bring together all the key players in the energy market: renewable energy producers with their projects, energy-intensive companies as their natural counterparty, traders acting as facilitators of the connection, and institutions within the electricity sector, committed to promoting renewables also through innovative instruments complementary to auctions. During the event, all possible forms of agreement between supply and demand in the electricity market will be thoroughly analyzed, also in light of new tools, giving a voice to analysts, operators, consumers, and institutions.

LANDSCAPE

In a context marked by strong momentum in the energy transition, for the “demand side” long-term electricity procurement instruments remain a central option for risk management, as well as for decarbonization.

Within this framework, regulatory mechanisms such as Energy Release and Green Conditionalities are helping end consumers become aware of the competitiveness of renewable energy sources, while new tools such as public guarantees—by strengthening the “bankability” of PPAs—will support the matching of supply and demand.
